NEW QUESTION: 4

A market researcher with Churn Brothers Brokerage is attempting to estimate the earnings per share (EPS) for a pharmaceutical index, and has gathered the following information:

Sales per share: $200

Next year's operating profit margin: 30%

Next year's depreciation per share: $18

Next year's interest expense: $13

Next year's corporate tax rate: 35%

Using this information, what is the EPS figure for this stock market series?

- A. $18.85
- B. $30.55
- C. The answer cannot be calculated from the information provided.
- D. $36.85
- E. None of these answers is correct.
- F. $17.75

Answer: A

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation:

The estimation of EPS for a stock market series involves five steps. Specifically, to determine an estimate of EPS for a stock market series, it is necessary to:

Estimate the sales per share

Estimate next year's operating profit (EBIDT), or operating profit margin

Estimate next year's depreciation per share

Estimate next year's interest expense per share

Estimate next year's corporate tax rate

Once estimates for these components have been determined, they are put into the following equation:

EPS for a stock market series =  $\{[(\text{Sales per share} * \text{operating profit margin}) - \text{depreciation per share} - \text{interest expense per share}] * (1 - \text{corporate tax rate})\}$ .

Imputing the given information into this equation will yield the following:

EPS for a stock market series =  $\{[($200 * 0.30) - $18 - $13] * (1 - 0.35)\}$  = $18.85

If you chose $36.85, remember that the depreciation figure is not added back to the EPS calculation. What we are looking at is an operating earnings after tax figure, not a cash-based figure.
