NEW QUESTION: 1

In the context of configuring a Hadoop cluster for HDFS High Availability (HA), 'fencing' refers to:

- A. Isolating a failed NameNode from write access to the fsimage and edits files so that it cannot resume write operations if it recovers.
- B. Isolating both HA NameNodes to prevent a client application from killing the NameNode daemons.
- C. Isolating the standby NameNode from write access to the fsimage and edits files.
- D. Isolating the cluster's master daemon to limit write access only to authorized clients.

Answer: A

Explanation:

A fencing method is a method by which one node can forcibly prevent another node from making continued progress.

This might be implemented by killing a process on the other node, by denying the other node's access to shared storage, or by accessing a PDU to cut the other node's power.

Since these methods are often vendor- or device-specific, operators may implement this interface in order to achieve fencing.

Fencing is configured by the operator as an ordered list of methods to attempt. Each method will be tried in turn, and the next in the list will only be attempted if the previous one fails. See NodeFencer for more information.

Note:

`failover` - initiate a failover between two NameNodes
This subcommand causes a failover from the first provided NameNode to the second. If the first NameNode is in the Standby state, this command simply transitions the second to the Active state without error. If the first NameNode is in the Active state, an attempt will be made to gracefully transition it to the Standby state. If this fails, the fencing methods (as configured by `dfs.ha.fencing.methods`) will be attempted in order until one of the methods succeeds. Only after this process will the second NameNode be transitioned to the Active state. If no fencing method succeeds, the second NameNode will not be transitioned to the Active state, and an error will be returned.

NEW QUESTION: 2

A recent advertisement campaign has increased traffic to an e-commerce application that is hosted within a public cloud environment. Customers are reporting that it takes too long to load their pages and submit orders. A cloud administrator looks at the metrics from the environment and sees high utilization of the CPU and memory resources. The cloud provider offers several preconfigured sizes for server template: x-small, small, medium, large, x-large, and 2x-large.

Given an expected increase in workload, which of the following is the BEST solution to improve application performance?

- A. Change the server template size for `Inxpc003` to 2x-large.
- B. Change the role of `Inxw001` from web to application.
- C. Provision additional `Inxpc` servers using the 2x-large template.
- D. Add memory to `Inxpc002`, `Inxpc003`, and `Inxpc003`.

Answer: A
